New Balance of Power in Europe

Rumania has joined the Berlin-Rome Axis, but Bulgaria weavers uncertainty, and Greece, with British and Turkish backing, carries victorious warfare deep into Italian Albania. Why does the world watch so anxiously the secret diplomacy going on behind these events in the Balkans? It is because Russia remains an undeclared factor—and Russia holds the new balance of power in Europe.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

Men in the News

Here are five general questions about men who have been in the news recently. How many can you answer?

1. Plans have been approved for a federal memorial to a former justice of the U. S. Supreme Court. What was his name?

2. Colonel Josef Beck has been arrested in Rumania. What position did he hold before the outbreak of war?

3. Governor Harold Stassen of Minnesota appointed Joseph H. Ball to the U. S. Senate in October. What seat did he take?

4. Director of the selective service act took a leave of absence from the presidency of the University of Wisconsin to take that position. He gained national prominence in the post he held before going to Wisconsin. What was that position and what is his name?

5. An air-rail warden recently mentioned in London dispatches is Phil Scott. Who is he?

It was Russia that warned Bulgaria not to join Germany and Italy.

It was Russia's refusal to join the Axis herself that gave Greece courage to oppose Italy's attempt to march across Greek soil to reach the Suez canal. Had Russia given the word Greece must have capitulated without firing a shot.

But Russia apparently has told both Greece and Turkey that she is satisfied with matters as they now stand in the Balkans. That leaves Greece and Turkey free to fight Italy—and it means Germany can't go to Italy's aid without bringing Russia into the war against the Axis.

All this is new to our generation of newspaper readers.

For hundreds of years the balance of power in Europe was held by England. On the one hand there would be France; on the other hand there would be either Russia, the Holy Roman Empire, or, in more modern times, Germany—and with these forces splitting up continental Europe the balance of power was held by England, a tight little island with the world's mightiest fleet.

But one of the great factors on the continent, France, is smashed, and today England, instead of holding the balance of power, finds herself engaged in mortal combat with a single continental enemy—and the middle party whose influence might throw the decision one way or the other today is Russia.

Russia isn't altogether admirable to our Western eyes. But we are dealing now with the realities of empire. And Russia apparently is responding in the same manner as any other empire. Russia seems to think the Axis is expanding too fast. Russia today is speaking warmly of Britain. Russia today is warning small Balkan nations to keep away from the Axis.

What we are seeing is the beginning of operations by the new balance of power in Europe—Russia—a story whose end no man can tell.

Cotton Towels Are Scarce

Japs Allowed One Each Year in New Ruling

WASHINGTON — Note on Oriental hygiene.

The Japanese government has altered its rules and regulations and the people hereafter will be allowed only one cotton towel a year instead of one every three years, as previously.

The new regulations, it is reported, came as the result of widespread complaint. When the one-every-three-years rule was invoked, the Japanese, at their daily ablutions, had to use "ersatz" towels. The cotton was needed for war materials.

This might have been all right had not the towels had a way of dissolving into moist nothingness. Hence the complaints and hence the new ruling and a permit for each Japanese to have one cotton towel a year.

Now-it-can-be-told Note: An absentee-voter friend from California tells us that the presidential election ballots of that state are printed under specifications of law, the candidates names appearing in alphabetical order just under the name of the party.

California's national ballot for the recent election, he says, ran like this: Prohibition—Roger W. Babson; Communist—Earl Browder; Progressive—Norman Thomas; Democratic—Franklin D. Roosevelt; and Townsend-Republican—Wendell L. Willkie.

Ditto Note: At one midwestern city where the Willie train stopped, two prankish newspaper men climbed on a truck with the five-piece brass band that was supposed to provide incidental music for the speech-making. After a lot of preliminary, gracious insinuation, the jokesters prevailed upon the band to play a request number. The timing was perfect. Just as Mr. Willie made his

Hope Loses to N. Little Rock 13-0 Friday

Wildcats Score in First, Third Quarters to Down Bobcats

NORTH LITTLE ROCK — North Little Rock High School's Wildcats scored their fourth victory of the season by defeating the Hope Bobcats, 13 to 0, at Wildcat Stadium Friday night but it was a losing proposition insofar as finances were concerned.

Only a few fans braved the rain to watch the North Siders gain the triumph, which was their third in a row. School officials put up cash on a rain insurance investment but the rain didn't have enough power at the right time. The policy provided for a payoff if one tenth of an inch of rain fell between 5 and 8 p. m.

Nichols Runs Wild

Running by Billy Ray Nichols featured the Wildcat victory. The North Siders gained possession of the ball on an intercepted pass early in the first quarter and a put exchange followed. After two plays, Nichols ran 47 yards for the first touchdown. The speedy right halfback found an opening on the right side of the Hope line, cut sharply to his right and slipped through the secondary to score standing up. Carroll Griffith plunged center for the extra point in the third quarter. Hope was backed deep into its own territory and Foy Hammons Jr., who did a good job of punting, kicked out from the end zone. Nichols took the ball on the Hope 30 and returned 20 to the 10. Griffith made seven yards to the three and then Nichols went over in a cut back. A line play failed in the extra point attempt.

Hope was unable to get going against the heavier Wildcats and did not threaten one time. The Bobcats reached Wildcat territory only once, in the fourth quarter, when they covered a fumble. Two off-tackle plays by Oliver netted the only first down for the visitors. It was a sturdy defense in the mud by Hope and frequent penalties against the Wildcats that held the score to a low total.

Flu Creeps Up Again

Public Health Service Watches Chart Sharply

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The Public Health Service is watching sharply a rising curve on the nation's influenza chart. New cases of flu are being reported at a rate 13 per cent higher than average—856 new cases for the week ending October 26 compared with a 758 median for the corresponding week over the last five years.

Officials say there is no cause as yet for national alarm but that the situation calls for close observation, particularly during November, usually the epidemic-indicator month. In the 1929-1930 epidemic, the curve of new cases rose almost vertically in November.

Watch New Vaccine

Health authorities have been heartened by the development of a prospective new weapon in the fight on the sneeze-chill-catch malady. A vaccine, reported to have shown experimental, a high degree of protection against influenza, recently was produced in the laboratories of the Rockefeller foundation.

Army and Navy medical officers are keenly interested in the new vaccine consisting of flu viruses and strains of distemper. In the 1918 epidemic, nearly half a million persons, including thousands of men in the military service, died of flu and flu-induced pneumonia.

This year's cases in the states, as well as 100,000 last summer in Puerto Rico and 7,000 in Hawaii, have been of a comparatively mild type. Health authorities warn, however, that all cases should be regarded as potentially serious, because of the danger of complications.

Persons who try to keep on their feet and "stick it out" with the flu contribute the greatest number to the death rolls, because they are walking storehouses of infection and frequently succumb after unwarranted exertion.

Protective Measures

The Public Health Service recommends these general protective measures for the individual:

1. Avoid needless contact with others. Walking to and from work, if practicable, is good exercise and keeps one from overcrowded street cars and buses.

2. Avoid chilling, but take advantage of as much open air and sunshine as you can.

3. Keep up your health by using plenty of clean water internally and externally; by eating clean wholesome food, and by sleeping at least 7 hours out of each 24.

4. Avoid persons who are coughing, sneezing or sniffing. Do not cough or sneeze yourself without using a handkerchief.

Many Yet Few

A codfish can produce approximately 6,000,000 eggs, but only about half a dozen of these mature into adult fish. Most of the eggs fall prey to other fish.

The Swiss are so short of fodder this winter that French army horses crossing the border with the defeated soldiers have been turned into sausages.

The Rev. Harry Wintermeyer, minister of St. Mark's Episcopal church will deliver the sermon with all other pastors and many other religious leaders participating.

Reddies Win Over Oklahoma

Henderson Trounces Northwest Teachers 19-3

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. —(AP)—T he Henderson State Teachers scored three times in the last half Friday to come from behind and whip the Northwest Oklahoma Teachers from Tahlequah, 19 to 3.

The visitors battled Henderson to a standstill the first two periods and held a 3 to 0 margin at the half by virtue of Bob Little's 18-yard field goal booted at a wide angle in the second period.

On the ground and in first downs the visitors equaled Henderson's best efforts but the Oklahoma attack lacked the cohesion shown by Henderson.

Fullback Fletcher Kizzia scored the first Henderson touchdown in the third, halfback Buddy Parker the second in the same period and Harold Thomas the third on a pass in the fourth.

Nashville, Ft. Smith Upset; Trojans, Leopards Tie

BLYTHEVILLE — The Blytheville High School Chicks clinched the conference championship Friday night with a 25-to-0 victory over Benton. Monk Mosley scored three of the touchdowns on a muddy field.

Nashville Upset

HORATIO — In a jolting upset here Friday afternoon the Horatio Lions defeated the strong Nashville Scrappers by a score of 14 to 12 in a game played in a downpour of rain for three quarters and on a field that was a sea of water. The Lions played a inspired game behind some beautiful punting by Gibson, Horatio back, who for an entire third quarter kept the Scrappers backed up in their own 10-yard zone by repeatedly kicking out of bounds within a few yards of the Nashville goal. Gibson's punting was accurate despite the soggy ball and blinding rain and his two perfect place-kicks after touchdowns were the margin of victory for the Lions.

Trojans-Leopards Tie

HOT SPRINGS — Playing in a steady downpour, the Hot Springs High School Trojans and the Malvern Leopards battled to a scoreless tie Friday night.

The game ended with the ball resting squarely on the 50-yard line.

Neither team was able to make a headway, and only once was there a serious threat. A penalty and a fumble halted that. Fumbles were so frequent that the official statistician quit counting after the second quarter.

Fordyce Takes El Dorado

FORDYCE — On a wet field, in a steady downpour of rain, the Fordyce High School Deddlows won their homecoming game from the El Dorado Wildcats, 13 to 0, here Friday night.

Trailing, 15 to 0, as the second half opened, Bauxite came within two points of tying the score by the end of the third quarter. The Wolves then made two scoring drives, with touchdowns by Colton and Stanton. Outstanding for Prescott were Stanton, Willis and Colton in the backfield, and Britt, Wilson, Adams and Elmore in the line. For Bauxite Stiles and Kennedy were the main threats.

CONCERNING BUTTONS — AS A matter of information to local housewives, certain facts about buttons should be considered. Pearl Buttons, made from mother of pearl shell, have proved their superiority over every other type of button. No other button combines the durability, lustre and beauty of pearls. It is important, therefore, that you examine carefully the buttons on your wash garments you buy. If they are Pearl Buttons you can be certain of the service they will render, and you can be assured that their presence is a sign of quality in the garment itself. See that all wash garments you purchase have Pearl Buttons.

Fires of Light, Fires of Darkness

Fire destroys, but it can also purify. Bonfires in Chicago and in Berlin remind us of that.

The bonfires in Berlin lit up the night sky in May of 1933. In open squares of the city the flames leaped upward. Men were burning books. The bonfires of Chicago were burning campaign tracts.

There are essential differences between these bonfires. Those differences mean much to America.

In the Berlin bonfires the flames licked at books snatched from libraries by zealous young Storm Troopers obeying a mandate from above. In Chicago, men came voluntarily and eagerly to cast into the flames the printed pamphlets and circulars of a spirited political campaign—material no longer of value after the people had made their decision.

In the one case the product of the mind of thoughtful men was burned because Authority had said "It is good for you to read these things." In the other, men came of their own free will to destroy symbolically the animosities which had temporarily divided them.

And when the bonfires of Berlin had burned low and flickered out, there was a deepening of the darkness over the land, while in Chicago the very ashes of the fires seemed to glow with illumination, and a dawn of good-will supplanted the dancing flames.

It was precisely because men were unable to set aside political animosities in Germany after election, that the German Republic sickened and died. Among multiple parties, none ever attained a majority. Even when in power, any party always had the others hanging to its flanks like a pack of hungry wolves, not in criticism or even in opposition, but in a savage obstructionism. The result was such a desperate longing for some kind of unity that the German people finally achieved it by truncheon and whip.

The ashes of American political bonfires, thank God, contain not the obliterated thought of men much wiser than the book burners, but only the remains of political passions burnt out and discarded.

BUENOS AIRES—The advice I can offer fellow Argentines visiting the United States for the first time is this—be yourself.

Don't think yourself a Don Juan (and behave like one) because a North American girl accepts an invitation to spend an hour or an evening with you. And don't try to transform yourself into a New Yorker overnight by buying "Yankee" clothes. It won't work.

The seven-thousand mile step from Buenos Aires to New York is an easy and happy one if the Argentine visitor will only help to make it so. North Americans at home are even more pleasant than abroad—friendly, quick to accept and entertain strangers—but they are quick to resent violations of their hospitality.

Mix With the Folks

These ten commandments helped me through three pleasant months in the States. Perhaps they will help other Argentine visitors also:

1. Do not associate too much with other Latins. Make friends with and be with the North Americans.
2. Being a foreigner has certain advantages and certain disadvantages—exploit the former and hide the latter. There are few Argentines in the United States and the people are interested in us.
3. Do not imitate North Americans. That which appears natural for them may be artificial or forced in one of us.
4. Do not be impatient because so little is known about Argentina—it is part of your job to tell them of our city, our subway systems, our parks, our country.
5. When asked where you come from, explain what a great country Argentina is. But don't lie too much.

Gasp at 'Biggest' Things

6. When you are told—as you will be many times—that something is "the largest in the world" never forget to admire it and let out a big, loud "O-O-O-OH."

7. Accustom yourself to walk rapidly, even if you are going nowhere and have nothing to do.

8. Do not change your manner of dressing while in the United States.

9. Never ask for anything that is not "standard." Life in the United States is based on standardization, and attempts to change it may result in embarrassing moments.

10. When a North American girl accepts an invitation to go out with you alone remember that acceptance does not signify a special interest on her part—she is used to accepting such invitations from many of her friends.

I found that the North American woman enjoys a degree of freedom worthy of admiration. To point out this independence from prejudice is one of the greatest praises of North American civilization.

RIO DE JANEIRO—Brazilians, from President Getulio Vargas down to the poorest "caboclo" (back country-man), think the American is pretty much all right.

Anyone with an average education in Brazil knows an American foreign policy almost as well as an average New Yorker. He doesn't know so much about domestic politics as the New Yorker, of course, but names like LaGuardia, Borah, Garner and Willkie are bywords to him.

Babe Ruth Famous, But Why?

Take sports. Baseball is one of the few important games not played in Brazil. But the name of Babe Ruth is as well known in Brazil as that of Leonidas, the most famous Brazilian football (soccer) player, although the Brazilian doesn't understand what Babe Ruth did to get famous.

There are a lot of reasons why Brazilians feel close to Americans. Traditionally, foreign policy has been pro-American. The United States is Brazil's greatest foreign market and her greatest provider.

American movies are by far the most popular, and through them the Brazilian has gotten to know a lot about American life. Some of the ideas he gets are not quite true, as I found out on my trip to the States.

All Americans Together

In some other Latin American countries, the man from the United States is called a "North American." Here we call him, usually, just an "American."

It is true that the dealer in tourist articles doesn't seem to treat the American very well. He sells things that attract the tourist for a price two or three times what he would charge a native.

But that is business, and when a tourist lands in Rio wearing a Sahara sun-helmet—as one occasionally does—you can't help feeling he was fair game for not having informed himself a little better.

Put on Too Much Dog

We look on the American tourist as a heavy drinker. The sailors—from war vessels or merchant ships—look to the bars.

One angle that occasionally strikes us about the Americans who come here to work is that in many cases they display the annoying characteristics of the "nouveau riches." They have held secondary positions in the United States but take relatively important positions on coming to Brazil, and the American dollar goes a long way.

Comes the most difficult part of this story—the American woman. The Brazilian likes his girl black-haired, dark-skinned, affable, quiet, affectionate and, above all, 10 per cent devoted to the man. But the American girl seems to us more the sports-woman, more independent, less affectionate. So we don't usually fall in love with her, though we admire her.

A queen bee has no part in ruling the hive, so is not a queen. The true rulers are the worker bees.

DUDE COLLEGE

BY OREN ARNOLD

YESTERDAY, Andre is unusually interested in the Mexican girl. Working with her, he decides, will be a pleasure. If his plans succeed, he buys a car, installs himself as a guest at a dude ranch. At a filling station he meets the Montana girl again, overhears some story about Ronnie's bravery.

RONNIE TO THE RESCUE

CHAPTER VI

RONICA BAILEY felt that utter despair, born of terror, when danger is all around you and nothing is to be done.

She had slipped off her horse and crept forward, afoot in sheer adventure, spirit and curiosity. She lacked even the pearl-handled pistol that stayed in her plane. So, she couldn't flee and she couldn't fight, and a hundred yards off an American officer was battling with five desperate men. She peeked out between two rocks.

Actually, she had a side view of the little battlefield. She could see all five of the aliens—two of whom unmistakably were dead or wounded now. Suddenly she observed that Starr was no longer shooting.

"O-o-o-oh!" It was almost a moan. "I wonder if he is—is dead!"

Fury began to replace the fear that assailed her, because those aliens had shot at her once earlier in this day and she had done nothing to cause it. She decided now that she must go back for help.

Whatever had Mr. Starr meant, coming out here single-handed anyway? She crept back toward their horses. Her own had been tied near him.

When she got there she saw the stock of the rifle in Starr's saddle scabbard. She remembered he had worn two side arms, but—

Then Ronica did a characteristic if foolhardy thing. She took the officer's gun, opened it part way to see that it was loaded, and started right back to the spot she had fled from.

Even before she got there she heard more shots.

"All right!" she heard Starr yell, and was happy for it. "Come out of that with your hands up! Manos arriba!"

He mixed his commands in English and Spanish, but the tone, not the actual words, told Ronica of his desperation. Somehow she knew he was bluffing, possibly hurt.

She crept to a huge boulder, then dropped to hands and knees and started crawling. She had the side view of the battlefield now, and by moving from rock to rock, she came within 50 yards of the embattled men. Then she paused behind a rock about hip high.

"I can shoot from here!" She said it, and she was physically calmer than she imagined she could be. Muscles were tense. She lifted the rifle, rested on the shoulder, and took a perfect, nerveless aim—a sharp bead right through the sights and onto the torso of a man dressed in dark clothing. Only the poorest of shots could have missed.

"No! No-no!" She murmured that, too. Not aloud, but to herself. Try as she would, Ronica Bailey could not thus shoot down any man!

All at once she shouted. "MR. STARR! I'M HERE! YOU MEN—YOU BETTER DO WHAT HE SAYS!"

Her words sounded inadequate, silly, she realized. Muscles had begun to tremble, and now she was too utterly frightened to speak with anything like the threat and menace she had meant to put into her voice.

Instantly, somebody turned and shot at her.

She didn't try again to call out or aim closely. She just shot back.

The rifle thumped her shoulder. She sat back, astonished, and gazed at the thing before she thought to pump in a fresh shell. Quickly then she raised up and shot again.

All at once she heard voices calling, and while she didn't understand the words, she did hear Starr. She peered over her rock again to see three of the men standing, arms high. They glanced first toward her and then toward Starr, who was coming forward now with both pistols drawn.

She saw him handcuff the men together, but when she heard him call out to her she was shaking too much to answer.

ON the front porch of the Rocking R Ranch, Thomas U. Bailey sat staring fondly at his daughter. She had been home less than an hour, and the tan, strong-faced Border Patrol officer had done most of the talking so far.

"Well, I'll be eternally damned!" Mr. Bailey repeated himself often. "Ronnie, you'll get into scrapes no matter where I put you. I had thought that out here—"

"Hold on, Mr. Bailey," Officer Starr interrupted. "If it hadn't been for her, I'd be a corpse, and no fooling! They thought I had big help. I admit I shouldn't have let her go alone, but she said she could show me the right place, and—well she just kept insisting, and—"

"I know just how it is, Mr. Starr! I am her father, but I—"

Even Ronnie smiled then. "You'd think I was a terror," she said.

"No, ma'am," Starr resumed. "But I am here to say this—when ever you want anything from the U. S. Border Patrol—anything in the world, miss—why you just whistle. And you, too, Mr. Bailey. As you know, we have a force of men guarding the line between the U. S. and Mexico to catch aliens slipping in and narcot—smuggling and any criminal we can. And if it hadn't been for Miss Ronnie here—"

"You say those were not Mexicans, Mr. Starr?" Bailey asked.

"No, sir. Japanese. Hadn't expected that. We don't catch many here."

"And they weren't aliens, after all, but American born?"

"Yes, sir. They had proof of that. Fingerprint records, photos, birth certificates, everything. All I can file again is 'em is an unlawful weapon charge, and resisting an officer, and they can plead misunderstanding and mistaken identity and all to that, even. But that don't make Miss Ronnie's help any less impor—"

"I know, I know, Mr. Starr. But—see here, what would five men be doing out on the desert that way?" Mr. Bailey's face was intent now. He looked closely at the officer.

"Said they was hunting."

"You—believe that?"

"Well, no sir. Nothing to hunt now. Especially with just pistols."

"Um," Mr. Bailey meditated a moment. "Look here, Mr. Starr, you appear to be a level-headed man. And you are a federal officer. I—Ronnie, call Fabian to bring out some refreshments, eh?"

Ronica, slightly surprised, nevertheless got up to obey. Fabian, the Mexican cook, would be in the rear somewhere, she knew.

WHEN she was gone, Mr. Bailey spoke again to the Border Patrol man, but in low tone.

"Mr. Starr, do you know why I am out here? Besides my health, I mean?"

"I have my ideas, sir. Nothing official yet, but—well, I know you manufacture bombing planes, and there's a new bomb sight, and—"

"Exactly, Starr! Now, sir—about these men, do you suspect what I suspect?"

Officer Starr nodded. Ronica was back on the porch.

Fascists

This situation has bettered, however, since the Federal Communications Commission let it be known that it was on the watch. F. C. C. agents "monitor" all foreign-language broadcasts in America periodically, and any foreign-language station may at any time be required to submit recordings of any broadcast it has given. The mere knowledge that this watch is being kept, according to F. C. C. officials, has toned down the propagandistic broadcasts to a remarkable degree.

Both the Nazis and the Fascists have made some efforts to extend their influence to other nationality groups. A number of Ukrainian and Hungarian organizations serve the axis cause in America. In many cases this end has been gained through outright subsidization of newspapers, fraternal groups and the like, in others, the axis agents have simply worked with existing groups of a Fascist tendency.

Lately, the possible activities of the Vichy government of France in this country have caused U. S. officials some concern. Gaston Henry-Haye, the French ambassador, was formerly on intimate terms with Otto Abetz, who is generally credited with having helped perfect the Nazi fifth column arrangements in France. Requested to leave France before the war began, Abetz returned in triumph after the surrender—as German ambassador.

There have been hints that the tie between Abetz and Henry-Haye remains unbroken.

Credit Board Elects Short

Again Member of St. Louis Farm Credit Board

R. E. Short of Brinkley, Arkansas, has been re-elected as a member of the Sixth District Farm Credit Board of St. Louis, announces F. W. Niemeyer, chairman of the Board and general agent of the Farm Credit Administration of St. Louis.

He represents the 50 production credit associations in the Sixth Farm Credit District—Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas—being first elected by them three years ago and at the present election named to a second three-year term expiring December 31, 1943.

Mr. Short was born in Illinois, was reared on an Iowa farm, and for the past twenty years has owned and operated a large rice, cotton, and livestock farm in Lee County, Arkansas. He is president of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation, vice-president of the Arkansas Rice Growers Corporation of St. Louis, and the St. Louis Bank for Cooperatives. Approximately 30,000 farmers in Illinois, Missouri, and Arkansas are members of the 50 associations participating in Mr. Short's re-election. Through their association these farmer-members have, since the production credit associations were first organized seven years ago, borrowed more than $140,000,000 for the production of crops, livestock, and for other seasonal farm operations.

As one of the seven members of the Sixth District Farm Credit Board, Mr. Short serves as a director of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis, the Production Credit a director of the Little Rock branch of the Eighth District Federal Reserve Bank.

Mr. Short is also a member of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation, vice-president of the Arkansas Rice Growers appearance, the band blared for the request, "Happy Days Are Here Again." Man who laughed heartiest at being introduced with Roosevelt's old campaign song: Wendell L. Willkie.

Musicians' Dilemma Note: The Department of Commerce has just added two more to its rapidly growing list of problems created by our war-disjointed trade. The imports of harmoniums and accordions have struck a decidedly sour note. It seems that before the war most of our "mouth harps" came from Germany. In an eight-month period since the war started, harmonium imports dropped from 5,611,340 to 1,953,480. BUT, of those pre-war imports, 5,100,138 harmoniums came from Germany, while since, we have received only 226,183. Most of the difference was made up by tripling our imports from Japan to 1,600,000 and getting another 100,000 from China and Switzerland.

The accordion and concertina business wasn't so bad for a while, but it's getting rapidly worse. Imports of piano accordions with less than 120 bass keys dropped 65 per cent in the period reviewed to 8,308—but Italy supplied more than 7,000 of these. Italy also supplied more than 11,000 of the 12,000 accordions with more than 120 bass keys which were imported in the eight-month period. That was before Italy was in the war.

It begins to look as if there is a good opening in the harmonica and accordion business over here.

Modernization of Laws Note: The statute books of the United States carry laws forbidding either the photographic reproduction of coins or stamps, except in the case, respectively, of numismatic (coin) and philatelic (stamp) journals. In order to publicize their laws properly, the Treasury Department, on the one hand, and the Postoffice Department on the other ruled that all newspapers are numismatic and philatelic journals.

"NO-PACK" Guarantee

"Best Buick Yet"and NO "PACK" IN THE PRICE!

YES SIR—we back up this best of all Buicks with an ironclad written guarantee that there is no "pack" in our prices!

All you pay is the advertised factory price of the car—plus freight and any accessories you order.*

And you not only get an itemized invoice proving that there are no hidden charges or unexplained "extras," but you get a guarantee under which you can collect in full any item that can be shown to be an unjustifiable charge.

That means real savings to you. And it means fair, honest and above-board pricing—and a willingness to sell our cars on their own merits.

We will allow you a full and fair allowance on your present car in trade. But we will not deliberately inflate our delivered prices just so we can offer padded trade-in allowances as bait.

Here you get a good car at an honest price—a real value, sold without trickery or deceit.

Come in and look these Buicks over. Match their size, style, performance, value with anything else near their price. See every detail of the price, plainly laid out before you.

Might as well get the best while you're buying—and get it on a basis of fair and square dealing.

*Local taxes we are required to collect are of course additional.

WHAT IS A "PACK"?

A pack is an extra item slipped into the delivered price of a new car to enable a dealer to offer more for your present car than it is really worth in trade. It is sort of "bait" intended to make you think you're getting a better deal than you actually are. Ask us for a free copy of "What You Pay" and see how the "pack" can cost you money.
